ALLEY BUOLED IN

MONDAY MORNING, FEBRUARY 15, 1858. WALL STREET: WHAT IT IS, AND

WHAT IT IS NOT. The following paragraph, which we find in a late number of the N. Y. Tritune, gives a rather amu-ing, and at the same time graphic, idea of Wall street; tures are peculiar. No 'Change Alley is like siery; with many other Goods adapted to the um; Ellis' Citrate of Magnesia; Holloway's it; no other Bourse-no other Rialto. Trin- Season; which for cash, or to the prompt trade, Pills and Ointment; Rose's Expectorant; Ayer's ity Church looks down upon it, like a super- will be sold very cheap. visor, but Trinity Church cannot Christianize it. Like a melon growing next to a pumt kin, the church may have a savor of its neighbor, but Wall street will never obtain any flavor from the church.

The name of Downing street, in London, is irrevocably associated with diplomacy; so Bleached Sneetings Damask Table Cloths, Ta- in every respect tor first crops; also, Champion is Wall street with stock-jobbing; but as Downing street is not full of foreign minis- heavy Irish Linens, white and colored Brilliants, Dwarf; Mammoth Marrow; Early May; Blue ters with faces Palmerstonward, neither is super French Lace Veils, French Linens, plain Imperial; Sugar Peas; Large Dwart; Marrow-Wall street occupied solely by the members of the bankers' board.

Wall street is not a long street, though it is felt a long ways. A man, without corns. can walk the length of it in five minutes .--Another, if he should keep on, would find him in the East River. It is not a wide street. Bids have been made from curb to curb. Wheels get "locked" there daily, especially near the head of it, and a vast deal of highly ornamented profanity is done by sweet tempered carmen, who, having wedged themselves in, seem to think that, "like the poor debtors," they can ewear themselves

It is not a handsome street; still there is nothing wooden in it, except, perhaps, the heads of some stock buyers. White marble, brown freestone, terracotta and substantial granite, bespeak its wealth. Here is that wonderfully intricate building, the Mere to make room for an early Spring supply. chant's Exchange, as full of lawyers, losurance and other offices, as a dog is of fleas .-Near by is the locus in quo of the brokers' board, where many millions of dollars daily "change hands and cross over," while the members cheerfully (speaking in metaphor) "balance to their partners." In the rotunda sisting of Capes, Tippets, Talmas, Cuffs, and of the edifice real estate auctioneers are crying assiduously, yet without shedding a tear, desirable FURS. over sacrifices of property to an almost fabulous amount. On the outer side of Wall, at the corner of Nassau, and facing Broad street, standsnay, it don't stand, but squati--the Cu-tom House, where there has been so much hard swearing over fraudulent invoices and political assessments, that the white marble columns have turned as gray as the old man's bair, or as Chelmsford granite, which they much resemble. On the other side of the street is an illustrious row of banks and insurance offices, with foreign insurance agents, land agents, coal agents, railroad agents, steamship agents, and many other sorts of agents, (Satan's too, perhaps,) including some lawyers on the sccond and higher fluors. The basements swarm with brokers. Every nook and cranby in all these buildings command high rents. Add to this picture innumerable groups of earnest-talking, so lding, chaffering. gesticulating men, dividing the rapid cuirents of merchants, brokers, clerks, foreign consuls, financiers, and commercial edit rs, who are continually passing, and you, who have never seen the notorious thoroughfare, will have a tolerably graphic idea of Wall his brain, that he may be a walking edition of the Catechism-that he may contend fiercely for the faith as he has received itthat he may pursue the rate of heresy with a scent as keen as that of a Scotch terrier, and persecute the man whom, in his distempered and presuming judgment, he has marked as a hereitic, and yet be as vindictive, and selfish, and foul, as man can be. The world wishes for better fruits, and when those fruits shall manifest themselves, the propagators of Christianity will have less occasion to bemoan the lack of progress which their cause is making among men." The above paragrah, though a part of a rebuke, administered by the Springfield Republican, a secular paper, to the conductors of certain religious journals, is worth the reading of all who bear the Christian name. Our holy religion was designed to regulate the everyday life of those who profess to be its subjects. But in how many instances does the 'fruit' of Christianity as exemplified in the ordinary duties of men, utterly fail to commend the gospel to those who have never
